

Table Temperature Alignment Project

Research Publication

Cross-Cultural Perspectives on Table-Human Value Alignment

Yamamoto, K., Santos, M.L., Eriksson, A.

Comparative Safety Studies, 9(3), pp. 201-245 (2023)

DOI: 10.1080/css.2023.0903

Abstract

Different cultures maintain varying relationships with furniture, raising questions about the universality of table alignment goals. Through surveys in 23 countries (n=12,400), we find near-universal agreement (94.2%) that tables should not outlast their owners in extreme temperature scenarios. However, we identify significant variation in acceptable 'alignment tolerance bands,' with Nordic respondents preferring tighter cold-alignment specifications and equatorial populations prioritizing heat-alignment parameters.

Full Paper

The full text of this paper is available at the publisher's website.

Please visit: <https://doi.org/10.1080/css.2023.0903>

For questions about this research, please contact the authors or email research@ttap.org.

Citation

Yamamoto, K., Santos, M.L., Eriksson, A. (2023). Cross-Cultural Perspectives on Table-Human Value Alignment. Comparative Safety Studies, 9(3), 201-245. <https://doi.org/10.1080/css.2023.0903>